"The Canadian imagination, as elusive as the Canadian identity, is nevertheless a reality. Henry Beissel finds its constant source of strength and renewal in the wonder of our northland. 'North is/ where all parallels/ converge.' Explorers, exploiters, painters, poets, have all made their private claims upon it, but this epic is the first to see it in its entirety, as a matrix which binds the whole together in a national mythology. Our history and our future are brought within the author's imaginative range in this beautifully printed and splendidly illustrated edition."

F.R. Scott

"Cantos North is a rare and successful example of recent epic poetry which blends the representation of the experience of a land and a people with a lyric motion... Beissel's poems are illuminated and orchestrated by the mystery of Lach's thirty-two lithographs."
